

Despite the global financial crisis and Thai aggression, the Royal Government of Cambodia will continue to pay attention on the construction of infrastructure in all domains.

Cambodian Prime Minister Samdech Akka Moha Sena Padei Techo Hun Sen told a visiting delegation of Kok Dong company in a meeting here today, according to Ieng Sophalet, assistant to the Cambodian premier.

Infrastructure construction is a contributing factor to poverty alleviation, thus to the development of the country, stressed Samdech Techo Hun Sen, adding that the royal government will do its best to seek more financial assistance from the Republic of Korea to build infrastructure.

On the occasion, he highly valued Kok Dong engineering and construction company's contribution in building national roads, especially National Road No. 3, the main road for salt distribution.

For his part, Kok Dong President Mr. Song In Hoe told the Cambodian prime minister of his visit, the purpose of which he said is to seek Samdech Techo's good recommendations so that his company can contribute to the development of Cambodia.

He further recalled that his company has contributed to building National Road No. 3 and roads in Siem Reap province.
